Mistakes are unavoidable in life. But attitudes towards it may make a difference. I still remember them how my spoken English was improved. In a beginning, I always kept silent in our oral class to avoid make the making mistakes. Before long my teacher get to know about my situation. He encouraged me to speak out that I got what thought. Whenever I made mistakes and felt discouraging, my teacher will help me figure out how I could discouraged would have avoided them. I also joined in an English club to get more chances to speak. Practice makes perfect.
Now I can talk fluent in English. So don't ^ afraid of making mistakes. Learn from mistakes, and success fluently be is just waiting for us.

Dear Paul,

How are things going? I am writing to invite you to take part in a charity activity.

The Students' Union of our school is to hold a used book sale on the afternoon of September 5 on the school playground, aiming to collect money to buy books for children in poor areas. Anyone who is interested is welcome to donate some used books. If you would like to come, please bring several used books to donate and sell books with us. It is a very meaningful activity. We are really expecting your participation.

Looking forward to your early reply.

Yours,
Li Hua

Text 1

W: Did you go to the party held in the dining hall?

M: Yes, it was supposed to start at 6:30 p.m., but it was delayed for 30 minutes.

Text 2

M: I've heard you traveled around Europe last year. Is it true?

W: Not exactly. I visited three countries there, like France. I had planned to see Finland and Iceland, but I had to come back for my business.

Text 3

W: Have you brought the book I lent you?

M: I'm sorry. It completely slipped my mind. I promise I will bring it tomorrow.

Text 4

W: What is your plan for the coming weekend?

M: To take my son to the Children's Park on Saturday, on Sunday morning to do shopping with my wife, in the afternoon to keep my parents company at home.

Text 5

M: The university library is hiring these days. I'd like you to get ready for the interview.

W: I've found a suitable job in a bank, but thanks anyway.

Text 6

M: Congratulations, Betty.

W: Thank you. What about Peter?

M: Oh, he dropped the stick.

W: Bad luck! Do you know who won the high jump?

M: My classmate, Joe.

W: Your class did very well at the sports meeting. By the way, who was first in the men's 100-meter race?

M: It definitely belongs to Bob.

Text 7

W: Andy, you've been so busy lately that we don't see you any more.

M: I've been trying to finish this research project so that I can present my findings at the conference in July.

W: But that's two months away. You've still got a lot of time.

M: Not really. You see, I've finished all the research, and I've just organized all my notes, but it will take me almost two months to type them.

W: Well, if that's your only problem, I can type up your paper in less than two weeks.

Text 8

M: Well, Lucy, why do you look unhappy?

W: Oh, Mike. I've made three bad mistakes so far this week. This morning I forgot to give a very important message to my father, so he got really angry with me.

M: But you're usually very careful and never make mistakes. What's the matter with you?

W: I'm very tired. I don't know what I'm doing these days.

M: Have you gone to bed late recently?

W: I'm usually in bed at about ten. But I have been woken up at half past four every morning. And then I can't go back to sleep.

M: Why?

W: It's my new neighbor. He has to get up at half past four every morning and he always turns his radio on loudly.

M: Ask him to turn it down then.

W: OK. I'll have to talk with him.

Text 9

W: Hey, Adam. I'm worried about my sister Alice. She's in college and has just declared art as her major.

M: Why does that worry you? I've seen her paintings. She's very talented in art.

W: I know. But I'm afraid that once she graduates she won't be able to make ends meet. It is said that most artists only make about 60 percent of what the average person makes a year. What's more, it's harder for art majors to find a full-time job. But she doesn't seem too concerned.

M: But you're forgetting that there's more for them to choose. Alice loves art and that's what's important. Even if she can't make much money, she'll be happy and emotionally satisfied.

W: But she'll have bills to pay. It's going to be hard for her to lead a lifestyle on what an artist makes.

M: Don't be worried and I know what you mean. Let's have a talk with Alice and listen to her.

W: OK. If she insists on her idea, we'll support her.

Text 10

One Sunday, a young couple, who had just fallen in love, was having dinner at an expensive restaurant. The restaurant had a garden-like and elegant environment. The food there was delicious and the service was superb. They had just ordered their dishes when they saw a lady sitting alone, looking at them. They smiled politely, but were a little surprised when the old lady came over to their table. The old lady told the young woman that she looked like her daughter. She said it would make her happy if they said "Goodbye, Mum" when she left the restaurant. How could they refuse? A few minutes later, the old lady stood up to leave. The young couple waved, as she had asked them, and said goodbye as the old lady walked out. When the young couple received their bill, they saw that it included the cost of the old lady's meal. They called over the manager and asked him what happened. "The bill includes the charge for your mother's meal," he explained. "She said you would pay."
